1. Early in July 1955, 13 landing craft belonging to the Soviet Navy were lined up at the central breakwater at Odessa. They looked like U.S. LCT's. They were painted gray with white superstructures. The superstructures had air ports. The height of the superstructures was one-third the height of the vessels. Three more of the same type of craft were at one of the piers. On 25 July, 23 vessels, including the old battleship SEVASTOPOL, two cruisers, and four destroyers, were lying at anchor outside the port.
2. In mid-September, the old cruiser KRASNYY KRYM and a smaller vessel conducted maneuvers off Cape Bolshoy Fontan. In the harbor was a three-masted sail training vessel. An old airplane ashore was making wind and noise; sailors were squirting water on the vessel to simulate rain; rags were being burned to produce smoke. Moving pictures were being taken.
